Lorrie Moore's People Like That are the Only People Here has an interesting analysis of the hospital setting. I find it particularly interesting how she uses the symbol of machines to talk about the people in the hospital and the process of being a parent of a child in the Peed Onk ward. Moore gives us the image of the hospital and the Mother's experience in the hospital as a mechanical process, which you become a part of when you enter it.

Lorrie Moore has written a kind of ecstatic, intergenerational, theses-nailed-to-the-door review of Sally Rooney's Normal People (both the novel and the TV show). I like the fiction of both Moore and Rooney. I am also a Gen X'er. I think Boomer vs. Millennial conversations are reductive and absurd but very entertaining, as is this review.
